Information and Support for Schools

North East Humanists is a partner group of Humanists UK
We have our own local Education Panel and school speakers trained by Humanists UK.

We can come into schools to present lessons, lead assemblies, contribute to inter-faith events and advise staff.

This document and other information are available through our website
<https://www.northeast-humanists.org.uk>

If you would like further advice or are interested in having a humanist school speaker please contact

Introduction

Purpose of the Additional Guidance

The purpose of the Additional Guidance is to provide RE teachers with easy-to-use information and ideas in order to teach about Humanism within the context of the Agreed Syllabus. The Agreed Syllabus provides a curriculum plan and schemes of work for each key stage, including post 16, and focusses on six core religions. Humanism and other world views are woven into sections throughout, rather than being addressed separately. Thematic studies for each key stage provide cross-cutting topics for interfaith study.

The Understanding Humanism website provides teachers with planning guidelines and a lot of teaching resources, prepared by Humanists UK.

<https://understandinghumanism.org.uk/>

<https://understandinghumanism.org.uk/planning-guidelines/>

However, navigating and selecting from these could be a time-consuming process. So these Guidelines are designed to provide short cuts to some of the most relevant and useable resources, for an initial study of Humanism.

The Guidelines are also important because 'the study of Humanism will often differ from the study of religions. It is a worldview without a holy text or founding figure, with no festivals, compulsory rituals, places or objects of worship, prayers, hymns, or structures of authority. To understand Humanism, it is necessary to explore certain philosophical questions and humanist approaches to them. Although humanists share many beliefs and values, they do not all agree about everything, in fact debate is at the heart of Humanism. But it requires more than that. It also involves an understanding of Humanism as a lived belief: its impact on people's lives in our modern, pluralistic, and often confusing world.' (Humanists UK)

Who the guidance is for

The Guidance is for teachers in Durham and in other North East Local Authorities who have purchased an adapted version of the syllabus for their use. It could also be useful for teachers using other Agreed Syllabuses, since many of the key questions and topics will be the same or very similar.

The Guidance is structured around each Key Stage. It will be readily useable by all phases: Primary, Middle and Secondary. Teachers, perhaps particularly those with a coordinating role for RE, will find it helpful for curriculum design, but all staff teaching RE should find it helpful.

Additionally it will be of interest to members of SACREs and staff of Local Authorities concerned with the quality of and support for RE. For more information, or services to support this document, please contact North East Humanists.

The National Context

Schools are required to include the study of non-religious views throughout all key stages. The 2013 Religious Education Council Framework for RE refers to religion and world views. The inclusion of non-religious world views in RE is widely considered to be best practice. Much more recently, September 2018, the Commission on Religious Education published their report 'Religion and World Views: The Way Forward' This influential Report proposes a new National Plan for RE which is centered around the proposal that the subject be called Religion and World Views. The report expects all pupils to

..... learn about world views and concepts including Humanism, secularism, atheism and agnosticism, including the various experiences of those who identify as having 'no religion'.

Whilst the National Plan has yet to be fully implemented, the overall direction for the development of RE is widely accepted. This is echoed in Wales by the Welsh Government decision in 2020 to consult on a plan to rename RE to 'Religions and World Views'. Currently GCSE syllabuses are proving less flexible in content, but the basic principles to address non-religious world views as appropriate apply nonetheless.

Why Humanism?

This vision for RE is in the context of changing social attitudes and beliefs. According to the latest British Social Attitudes Survey, conducted by the National Centre for Social Research and published in July 2019, 52% of the population identifies as non-religious. This percentage rises to 75% amongst younger people. A significant proportion of the non-religious, although not identifying as humanists, share many of the humanist principles and values.

'Studying Humanism can contribute towards schools' goals, and Ofsted requirements, of ensuring the spiritual, moral, social, and cultural (SMSC) development of young people, and the study of fundamental British values. It can help students to recognise that non-religious people have as much potential to explore questions of meaning and value as religious people, and that morality has a role to play in our lives independently of religion. The study of a non-religious worldview, and what makes it distinct from religious worldviews, can help enable students to recognise, appreciate, and celebrate diversity. It also allows young people the opportunity to discover how humanist and non-religious thinking have helped to shape our country's culture and identity. For many humanists, liberty, democracy and the rule of law are human values, not just British values, and the study of Humanism allows young people a wealth of opportunities to explore the merits of and challenges to each.'
(Humanists UK)

The latest version of the Ofsted Framework places greater emphasis on a student-centred curriculum design, with less emphasis on statistics and more on the quality of the curriculum. Conversation with staff and pupils are a major source of evidence. SMSC is seen as important for pupils to develop reflective views on beliefs and respect for all religions and world views. Studying Humanism clearly has a contribution to make to these.

How to use the Additional Guidance

This Guidance should be read alongside core sections of the Agreed Syllabus. Particularly important are the elements of RE: Knowledge and Understanding and Critical Thinking. Expectations by Key Stage should be applied to pupil learning about Humanism just as it is to religions.

The Guidance is organized around four Key Stages in charts with four columns.

Column one: Questions from the Question Bank in the Agreed Syllabus

Column two: Additional humanist questions drawn from the Understanding Humanism resources

Column three: Links to relevant Themes and Perspectives available on the Understanding Humanism website (see lists in the Appendix)

Column four: Examples of activities mostly from the Understanding Humanism Themes / Perspectives and a few other sources.

Additionally there are suggestions for key vocabulary.

Once teachers have used the web links in columns three and four the suggested resources and activities are easily accessible. These links contain other resources and activities which teachers may also want to explore and use.

Links to other sources, such as the BBC and YouTube, go directly to the resource.

Over the four key stages, resources and activities are drawn from all the Understanding Humanism Themes. All themes are drawn from in the primary phase and, similarly, almost all in the secondary phase. The recommended activities become more intellectually demanding over the four Key Stages, building on prior knowledge and increased maturity. This guidance, therefore, attempts to provide sound coverage taking account of progression.

Appendices

Two of the appendices provide comprehensive lists of the Themes and Perspectives available on the Understanding Humanism website.

There is also a link to inclusive assemblies which may be useful for broadening Collective Worship.

Collective Worship

The legal requirements for Collective Worship are quite separate from those for RE, as are the inspection processes. Within that framework schools may wish to broaden the content of their assemblies to be more inclusive.

The website below provides links to many organisations providing themes and materials suitable for assemblies for each Kay Stage.
