

Memorandum of Understanding between

AMOT and Durham County Council

2017 - 2020

AMOT

The Army Museums Ogilby Trust is a private charity founded in 1954 by the late Colonel Robert Ogilby DSO, DL whose wartime experiences made him a passionate believer in the inspirational power of regimental identity on the British soldier's fighting spirit. His Trust therefore set about the task of honouring the rich heritage of their individual regiments and corps through the medium of museum collections.

As a measure of success, today the Trust is linked with well over one hundred such museums throughout the United Kingdom, all as varied and individual as the regiments they represent. They are a rich source of historical information and they provide unique insights into the inspirational deeds of courage, bravery and good-humoured fortitude that have characterised the British Army through the centuries. In addition to the collections that are so proudly displayed, most of them possess valuable records and other archive material. They have something of interest for all, from Old Comrades to the adventurous young and from the serious student of military history to the casual visitor.

The DLI Collection

The DLI (Durham Light Infantry) collection dates from 1758 – 2011 and includes firearms, uniforms, archive, medals and ceremonial items among many others and is historically significant for the County. The collection is owned by the Trustees of the Former Durham Light Infantry and is curated and cared for on their behalf by Durham County Council.

In 2016, the DLI Trustees and County Council agreed a new sustainable approach to the conservation and display of the collection; the full collection was removed from a standard and aging museum building into a new state of the art collection and storage facility alongside the County's wider collections stores, at Sevenhills. This storage facility would be supported with an ongoing outreach educational programme and a range of exhibitions to showcase the collection.

Sevenhills (the home of the DLI collection) was opened in autumn 2016 and attracts researchers and historians, members of the DLI family and the general public – all of whom feel a local connection to their regiment. The primary focus is to make the collection come to life for a worldwide audience whilst maintaining the memory of heroic local people.

The education offer delivered and coordinated by the County Council curator and education team continues to enable the collection to connect the whole community, engaging primary and secondary schools, those people with disabilities, community groups, reminiscence groups, and history and heritage groups. It now predominantly reaches out to local communities (rather than simply schools) by working with them and is working closer with veteran military organisations, with a growing network of volunteer's veterans supporting the activity; talking to the children and groups.

The past year has demonstrated an increased appetite for outreach activity rather than the previously delivered traditional schools outreach model. Additional publicity, over the last twelve months, has opened up new avenues of communication and an increased desire for the public to request bespoke 1:1 sessions and more detailed enquiries.

In addition, the next five years will see five annual exhibitions to tell the remarkable stories, supported by a semi-permanent exhibition delivered in partnership with Durham University in which a selection of the collection is on show alongside a 'medal on demand' viewing service.

The location of the semi-permanent exhibition on Palace Green, next to the Cathedral and remembrance gardens, enables a greater passing footfall, and resilience through working in partnership, when resources are shrinking.

The County Council and the DLI Trustees have found a new solution to the challenging financial period and are keen to build on this in new ways, further enabling increased conservation of the collections and enabling access in new creative ways.

Rationale

Throughout this challenging change, AMOT has supported and guided both the DLI Trustees and the Local Authority. This Memorandum of understanding between the Local Authority and AMOT seeks to formalise our working relationship to ensure that the best future possible is provided for this important military collection.

Vision

AMOT will work with The DLI Collection and Durham County Council to deliver a programme of increased collection accessibility, preservation, and community engagement as part of AMOT's Arts Council England funded programme Army Museums into the Future. The aim will be to deliver a programme of events and activities to support the preservation, cataloguing and public access to the collections and to do so in a manner which enhance the wider development of knowledge, skills, and understanding within the army museums sector.

Background

AMOT, Durham County Council and the Trustees of the Regimental Chattels of the Former DLI, already have strong links in developing and supporting the reshaping of the DLI Collection offer.

This MoU underpins this existing activity and formalises the relationship between the two primary organisations. AMOT, is already committed to supporting the DLI Trustees to modernise and standardise their governance arrangements to enable the Board to be reskilled to provide a strong basis for the future. This MoU will further develop the relationship to support vital curatorial collections and development work to open up records to the public and enliven the DLI offer in a sustainable tangible way.

Action Planning

The collection moving to Sevenhills has enabled an audit of 'where we are' to be established, and to some extent engaged increased interest in the potential of the collection from a wide range of stakeholders.

The action plan, (appendix 1) identifies the stages the collection needs to progress through to move to a modern contemporary approach in preservation, access, display and engagement. This work is in line with our Collections Accredited Status and SPECTRUM standards. Clearly this list of tasks is beyond the resources and capacity of the County Council support.

In summary the action plan seeks to develop an accessible and simple way for local people to access the DLI Collection, in one cohesive and image laden website. This will be the primary outcome and core duty of the funded DLI Collection Project Manager. This task will be supported by the further development of an outreach programme, specialist training, engagement and upskilling of heritage and collections volunteers, involvement of Veterans of the regiment and communities across the county from which the DLI recruited.

It is hoped that working with AMOT a number of actions will be jointly agreed for funding.

- At present, only 40% of the collection (medals) have been completely audited.
 engagement of a dedicated project curator will enable us to expedite this process for the whole collection and enable information to be accessible to the public.
- Significant treasures will also feature 3D imagery protecting vulnerable and fragile objects from handling and helping us safeguard the integrity of all objects in the collection for future generations.
- Moving to a single Collections Management System will vastly improve access in a much shorter period. The approach will be to release the online records with enhanced object images in stages throughout the funding period, engaging audiences locally, nationally and internationally.

AMOT

Recent research identified that there is a need to support those working in army museums, both heritage professionals, and heritage volunteers, across a range of different subject areas including:

- To better understand and develop army museum collections
- Develop a programme of support for army archives

How we will work together

Our partnership will build on knowledge and experience from our previous successful working relationships and shared organisational learning. Together we will seek to establish a programme of training which supports those working on the collection, researching it and developing programmes which draw on the key skills of each organisation.

Regular dialogue will be held between AMOT and Durham County Council to ensure shared understanding, delivery of the action plan to time and to budget, and evaluation of both the partnership and the needs of the sector for future development.

Guiding principles

Both partners commit to:

- 1. Shared insight, skills and knowledge: we will use our shared understanding of the military sector to formulate successful and required training days.
- 2. Legacy: We will establish an easily accessible and searchable database to enable public interested in the DLI to search the collection and aid their study.

- 3. Evaluation: we will monitor the events and activities and conduct a survey with the sector annually to understand the effectiveness of our programming and the changing needs of the sector and respond accordingly
- 4. Planning: we will work together to plan for the future both in this area of work and other relevant activities which may benefit from shared partnership working.

Resourcing the Plan

Durham County Council, led through its Culture and Sport services, will continue to commit its current expertise to care for the Council's collections, including the DLI collection and our advice to the Trustees, and the provision of a vibrant programme of education and exhibitions, as best as possible within its current resource. The Council currently commits approximately £150k per year, in fulfilling its responsibilities towards the DLI collections. In addition to this resource the Council retains its support to the archive written collection, much of which is accessed by enthusiasts and also used in supporting a range of the exhibitions and outreach work. A clear joint working arrangement exists between the services ensuring a positive experience exists and single customer offer.

However, the capacity to make some of the sustianable planned improvements for the future of the DLI collection is challenged, particularly the detailed work around the collection and cataloguing/digitalisation.

In order to complete the additional work articulated in the attached plan and significantly move forward the DLI Collection, a funding request of £85,000 is requested from AMOTs funds across a 2 year period.

It is our intention that this would cover the initial two year period of the additional curator cost to specifically develop and deliver the programme of works. A funding schedule is appended as Appendix 2. The funding would provide a much needed boost to the DLI collection management.

Good partners agreement

AMOT and Durham County Council will each inform the other partner prior to any sensitive messages emerging that might impact on the other organisation. Both partners will share information with each other about any agreements with third parties as appropriate. Both organisations will observe confidentiality as required in relation to shared information that is not in the public domain.

Terms of the Memorandum of Understanding

This Memorandum of Understanding shall take effect from the date of signature by both parties and continue, in the first instance, for two years. It will be reviewed after the first nine months and annually thereafter by both organisations' lead officers. It is not intended to – and shall not – create any legal obligation between the parties.
